MENTONE Girls Grammar School is set to premiere When the Stars Go Blue, a play students helped create.

Melbourne playwright Lucy Stewart worked with students to write the play, which is set in 1946 Australia and follows two sisters who are sent away for the summer to the weird and magical fishing village called Broken Bay.

"It has been great to see the enthusiasm catch fire in the students," Ms Stewart said.

"It's interesting to see how students' creativity brings to life a skeleton you've given them."

St Bede's College and St James Regional College students are also taking part in the play, which runs from August 9-11 at Mentone Girls Grammar School.
